Michael J. Dady, the chairman of the Kings County Republican Campaign Committee, introduced Lieut -Gov. Woodruff as permanent charman. Mr. Woodruff said:

WOODRUFF'S CHEERFUL GREETING.

It seems good to get home. From all sources I have heard the good news that Kings county will give a substantial Republican majority. I also hear that we are sure to elect a majority of our candidates for Congress, a majority of our candidates for the State Senate and a majority of our candidates for the Assembly. To correspond with these bright prospects of home I bring to you from the forty-six counties of the State in which I have been campaigning tidings of a sweeping Republican victory. With very few exceptions these counties are going to give as large Republican majorities as they did four years ago.

Almost perfect is our party's organization throughout the State We are highly honored to-night by the presence of the greatest of all organizers, to whom is due the credit for the creation and development of this effective instrument which has now become the only hope of the nation. We are also honored this evening by the presence of one who during the past three years as chairman of the State Committee has brought this splendid Republican organization to its present state of per-

I thoroughly appreciate the privilege of pre-siding at this splendid meeting and am not going to make an extended speech in order to show what a good presiding officer I know

The others crowded along Montague street and whooped things up for McKinley and Roosevelt with the aid of several bands, sky rockets and red fire. The Academy meeting proved to be the largest and most enthusiastic hold at the Academy since the campaign of 1791. To use the language of a prominent police official: "It heats 'em all and means 20.000 plurality for McKinley and Roosevelt in Kings county next Tuesday."

The crowds began to gather at the Academy as early as 6 o'clock, and while waiting for the meeting to be called to order Halle's Military Band furnished concert music. "On, we'll never hand the old hag down."

For when she's up, she's up to stay:
Hands off! Is what we say.
And we'll never haul the old flag down."

"Three cheers for McKinley!" yelled a man and the audience nearly raised the roof with its answering shouts. Then the band had to play the "Star Spangled Banner" and for fifteen minutes the crowd cheered for McKinley and Roosevelt.

Shortly after 8 o'clock the Hon. Benjamin B. Odell, Jr., arrived at the Academy. He was accompanied by Lieut-Gov. Woodruff and other State officers. They received a great ovation, and had a hard time of it getting through the crowd to the stage door of the Academy. The members of the Williams Battery formed in single file and made a lane through the crowd so that Mr. Odell's party could reach the front of the stage. SPEECH OF CANDIDATE M'DONOUGH.

Mr. Odell was cheered again and again as he was returning to his seat on the platform. John T. McDonough, Secretary of State, was the next speaker. He said in part:

"Up in the hayfields and the cornfields where I come from we have only few meetings. But to see a vast body as enthusiastic as this gives us great courage. I am given but a few minutes in which to address you. I came principally to pay my respects to you. I am glad to see so many ladies present. In the lade contest in Great Britain the lades took a most important part, and I am sure that they will do great work here. Two years ago we had a very close fight in this State and every candidate was doing all he could to win. One of the candidates running on the State ticket made a house-to-house canvass and worked very hard in that way. Up in Albany he saw a pretentious looking house and he rang the bell and a matron lady came to the door, and then he saw a lot of beautiful children in the hallway. He then started to kiss each one, and after he had kissed them he said: "What beautiful children," "Why, "says she, "no; this is an orphan asylum." (Lauchter and applause I I shall not need to state that this was the State Engineer. He had kissed the whole household and hadn't got a vote. If he would do that tonight I think he would get many votes. We have gone on with our work and the work has been shouting lt reminds me of the story of a soldier over in Luzon. The shots were pouring in hot and heavy and many a man had failen, and one of the boys heard a fellow roaring and shouting and he said to him. Mr. (odell stepped to the edge of the platform like an old-time campaign speaker, although it had been stated that he would probably try to get out of speaking. In clear, loud tones he said:

He has been under the searchlight of public scrutiny for the last four years. They have had the searchlight on him You remember when it was first himted he was to be elected presiding officer of the Senate. They said: 'Wait, and see him go to pieces.' But he has made one of the most graceful-you mine enemy would write a book.' Once in four years the Democrats get ready for a big funeral on a large scale. They are getting ready for one now. [Laughter.] The indications are that the corpse will be ready on time. As Republicans we wont be expected to be sincere mourners at the wake nor will we be close enough in affiliation to the late lamented to appropriately send flowers. But we might properly send silver nails for the casket flaughter, in which will be laid away to sleep forever in dreunless oblivion the remains of Paramount Issue William Jennings Bryan and his beloved 18 to 1.

At the close of the meeting thousands of men and women pressed forward to try to shake the hand of Mr. Odell. The police had all they could do to keep the crowd back. When Mr. Odell and the members of his party reached their carriages a squad of mounted police cleared the roadway, and amid the cheers of thousands he left the Academy, escorted by four uniformed batteries, numbering 6,000 men.

CROKER FORESEES DEPEAT. No Muster of Leaders to Predict What the Vote

The Hon. Richard Croker let it be known resterday that he would not call the leaders of his organization together this year for a final pow-wow over the election prospects and to learn from each one of them just what the vote in his district would be. Ever since Mr. Croker has been the chieftain of Tammany he has had the leaders meet him on the Saturmany votes they expected to get for the ticket.

Wenderful stories have been told of these election forecasts. It has been said that leader after leader would predict to within a dozen votes of the total in his precincts, and that an error of the would have been told of these election forecasts. It has been said that leader after leader would predict to within a dozen votes of the total in his precincts, and that an error of the would have been told of these progresses and shall ask you to give prompt replies to our letters. That is very necessary to may be sure that anything you may be sure that an error of 100 would bring contempt and ridicule on the leader guilty of it. The annual preelection gathering at which the vote was foretold has been one of the fixtures of each campaign, and that Mr. Croker has decided not to have it this year is regarded as significant. Tammany men were of one opinion yesterday about the omission of the yearly meeting. They said that it meant that Mr. Croker had no real hope of Bryan's success and that he did not want to run any

Chairman Barnes says "Two weeks ago Mr. McGuire of the Democratic State Committee, upon the request of Senator Murphy, gave to the press a letter purporting to have been written by Mr. Odell, chairman of this committee, to William Conlee of Greenwich, Washington county, which letter was immediately pronounced by Mr. Odell to be a forgery

"Some days thereafter I called upon Mr. McGuire and Senator Murphy, and asked them letter known to be a forgery, and a clumsy and absurd one at that. Senator Murphy, to whom Mr. McGuire referred me, and who was sponsor for the alleged letter, stated that he would neither retract nor produce his proof that the letter was genuine. Our candidates been subjected in this State to ruffianly attacks; but in this matter official representatives of the Democratic party have deliberately uttered a forgery with the intent to injure Mr. Odell in his canvass.

"We, therefore, feel it incumbent upon the committee to give to the public the letters written by Mr. Odell to Mr. Conlee; also Mr. Conlee's affidavit stating that they are the only letters which he has received during the past year from Mr. Odell. We are ready to battle with our political adversaries in a fair manner, and expect them, although they are suffering from the bitterness of expected political defeat, to pursue the same tactics.

Made the Rounds of Chicage, Winding Up at 12 P. M.

Chicago, Nov. 2 — William J Bryan completed the second day of his whirlwind campaign in Chicago with a midnight meeting to the colored denizers of the Levee district. From first to last he made thirty speeches, theugh billed for only eleven, and his audiences were uniformly large and enthusiastic. His first speech of the day was made at 10 o'clock on the Lake front to more people by several thousand than could got within range of his woice, which is still strong, though somewhat roughened by use and weather. His text at this meeting was imperialism.

The candidate seemed to be in a more flippant humor than usual and interspersed his solemn scriptural quotations with occasional jest and parody. He made a hit with his audience with a vandeville turn which might have been entitled. A Republican speech in defence of imperialism as delivored by a Democrat.
